Let's all step up to save the climate

The summer holiday is fast approaching. It is such a wonderful time of year. Time to hang out with your friends, to have new experiences and maybe time to try out new activities.

In this paper, you get the inside scoop on loads of activities in many of Aarhus Municipality's amazing clubs and unions. I truly hope, you will find something that you want to try. You can try something familiar or maybe something brand new. No matter your choice, the clubs and unions are great places to hang out and make new friends.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend a heartfelt thank you to all the volunteers in the clubs and unions who make it happen. You make a huge difference to the children and teens in the municipality.

The summer holiday is also a time to pause and consider how we live our lives. What marks we leave behind.

It is old news that all over the world, climate change is a massive challenge. In Aarhus, we have set ourselves the steep goal of being climate neutral by 2030. The only way to achieve our goal is for all of us to be part of the solution.

That is why this paper focuses on the climate through holiday activities. You can meet two families who have worked hard to improve their climate habits. While it is difficult, it can also be fun. In any case, these families are amazing.

Just like 12-year-old Isabella. She picks up litter along the Aarhus coast line and you get her story in this paper too.

I hope, you will be inspired to take care of the climate and join the cause of creating a greener world.

I wish you and your family a great, active summer ☺

Rabih Azad-Ahmad
Mayor of Culture and Citizen Service

Some activities require enrolment, others you simply show up for on the day.

All activities have adult supervision.
Any equipment for an activity is available on location.

TWO FAMILIES CHANGED THEIR CLIMATE HABITS

The salami was switched to a plant-based sausage, no-screen Sundays were invoked and the plane ride to Spain turned into a shared car trip to Sweden. In a commune in Åbyhøj, two families decided to join a climate project to improve their climate habits.

How does hummus-paste and plant-based salami grab you? No cell phones on Sunday and a trip to Sweden rather than Southern Europe?

That became reality for 13-year-old Karla, 10-year-old Gunvor, 9-year-old Dante and 5-year-old Milo, when their parents signed up for project "Adopt a Climate Friendly Habit". A project that helps families in Aarhus improve their climate habits.

"At first, it was us parents who had the idea of signing up for the project. We wanted to know more about how to improve our climate habits. The kids were quick to join too, even though it was tough sometimes," says Jakob Egerup Edut.

We are sitting on the second floor of a villa in Åbyhøj that the two families Mathiesen and Edut share in their commune called Diddelid-delum. 5-year-old Milo is passing around cookies and insisting there is more than enough for all of us.

"We don't think of ourselves as climate warriors, but we do consider what we can do to spare the climate. For instance, we don't have a car, but we think it's difficult to figure out how we can maximise our efforts to spare the climate. Often, there are many different views and considerations to make," says Stine Egerup Mathiesen.

Aarhus Municipality and Vanebrudspalæet have teamed up to create the initiative Vanebrud for Klimaet (break habits for the climate), where families can volunteer to have their climate habits tested and learn what they can do to make improvements. Among others, the families were given access to a programme that calculates how much CO₂ they can save by changing various habits. Although this was a parent project, the kids were in from day one – even if it was a little hard sometimes.

"No-screen Sunday was the worst," the kids say in unison.

It is no secret that they have skipped the no-screen Sunday where they did not use the computer, tablet or phone.

"Occasionally, we will put away our screens for some hours, it just isn't a regular Sunday occurrence. It is great to increase our conscience when it comes to using our phones less, but in the grand CO₂ scheme of things, it just didn't

Here are the families' advice on how to live more climate friendly

1. Make it easy to change your behaviour

It doesn't have to be harder than necessary to live climate friendly lives. Maybe you try to find a plant-based alternative to the meat you like. Then that is where you start.

2. Skip "usually"

Be prepared to try out new things. We have to consider new options if we want to change our habits.

3. Talk about your climate habits

Talking to each other makes you smarter and so does sharing great experiences on improved climate habits.

4. Skip the plane-ride

There are plenty of more climate friendly holiday options. Travel by bus, train or share a car.

5. No-Screen Sunday

Turn off your phone, tablet and computer once in a while. It does not have to be every Sunday, but when possible make that much of a difference," Ditte Egerup Edut explains.

"We still take milk in our coffee and eat meat, but our awareness of how to avoid meat or switch beef for chicken or pork has increased. I don't really remember when we last bought a packet of minced beef," Jakob Egerup Edut adds.

"The veggie-salami was great too. But I didn't like the hummus-paste," says Dante Egerup Edut, 9, and the other children are quick to agree. They have tested some of the plant-based alternatives to meat, and some of them have become household staples. Others have not

In stead of flying south for their vacation, the two families rented a car and carpooled to Sweden

” It was just such a great trip. Really magical,” says Karla Egerup Mathiesen, 13.

It has also become second nature for the families to go for recycled materials when they are making new investments

” Often, you can find some great recycled stuff that is cheap and just as solid as new things. I like that a lot,” says Gunvor Egerup Mathiesen.

Talking about the climate more and turning their attention to their consumption has made a big impact on both families.

” I have rephrased an old saying: ‘It’s a waste of climate’. And I use that a lot. For instance, if you leave the tap running, I say ‘It’s a waste of climate’. It just makes you rethink what you’re doing,” says 13-year-old Karla Egerup Mathiesen.

Everyone agrees that they live more climate friendly now than before.

” If our children, and their children, are to have the same opportunities in this world that we did, we have to change what we do, and we are ready to do what it takes,” says Kim Egerup Mathiesen.

The climate project: Breaking habits for the climate

- Aarhus Municipality intends to be climate neutral by 2030.
- Private citizens are responsible for 2/3 of the CO2 emissions, therefore the individual citizen's emission is extremely important.
- The project offers up an opportunity for families to join and be inspired to change their habits. In 2021, 20 families joined the project, and received good advice on how to improve their climate habits. In 2022, even more families will participate. It is up to the individual family to decide what to focus on. For instance, diet or CO2 emissions.

Isabella takes home the trash

Isabella Kimborg is a Junior Marine Environment Guardian who picks up trash along the beaches and in the woods when she is out walking with her family.

There is far too much trash and garbage in this world. The beaches and woods in and around Aarhus are ripe with trash. 12-year-old Isabella Kimborg has made it her mission to change all that. It is fast becoming a habit of hers to bring a bin bag when she is out for a walk.

"I worry a great deal about the environment and I want to help," Isabella explains.

In school, she is known to tell her friends to use the bin and not litter in nature.

"A lot of people don't think about it if they litter just once or twice. After all, it's easier to just drop your trash than to find a bin. But if everyone thought like that, we would be knee-deep in garbage," she says.

A couple of years ago, Isabella discovered the Junior Marine Environment Guardians. The Danish Navy is responsible for the campaign which has more than 29,000 volunteer Marine Environment Guardians. They look out for our oceans and seas and help keep the environment in and around the seaside clean. Children and tweens aged 8 to 13 can apply to be Junior Marine Environment Guardians, like Isabella. It entails that you get some information about littering and the environment and some bags to collect trash that washes up on the Danish shores.

"There is a lot of trash along the beaches and in the woods. I always find a lot of empty bottles and once, I even found a can that used to contain oil," says Isabella.

IF YOU WERE PRIME MINISTER,
WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

"I WOULD HAVE SOME SPECIAL
BINS MADE TO PUT ALONG THE BEACHES AND IN SCHOOLS WHERE WE COULD ALL SORT OUR TRASH"

She has been a Marine Environment Guardian for about two years and gathers trash whenever her family goes for walks or trips.

"Sometimes, you can be a little tired and maybe you don't want to go, but once we do, it's always a good experience," she says and adds:

"I want to do something to make the world a better place for both animals and people. I hope that my behaviour will rub off on others when they see me picking up trash," says Isabella.

Isabella has a request for everyone:

"Don't litter, and let's start recycling and getting better at sorting our trash. What we do matters".

Facts about the Marine Environment Guardians

Since 2006, the Danish Navy's Marine Environment Guardians have spotted oil leaks and gathered trash on Danish beaches and seas. With its 29,000 volunteers, the initiative is the first and largest collective effort to fight marine pollution. The Marine Environment Guardian campaign is headed by the Danish Naval Defence Command, which is responsible for marine supervision, sea rescue, safety and marine environment in Denmark

What is a Marine Environment Guardian?

The Marine Environment Guardians are people who have agreed to take care of our marine environment – at the beach, by the harbour or at sea. If you sail, dive, surf or simply love walking along the beach, you can help limit marine pollution or report oil leaks.

Junior Marine Environment Guardian

Future generations deserve clean water. Clean water requires a joint effort. A great place to start is to join the Junior Marine Environment Guardians, which is for children and teens aged 8-13.

A RECYCLE FLY-BY

Captain Holm and Senior Flight Attendant Stegeager travel around the City of Smiles (Aarhus). Their cargo is recycled toys. We went flying with Det Finurlig Flyselskab (the quirky airline) to learn more about their children's workshops on climate and sustainability.

When you arrive at Information Vest in Gellerup, HQ for Det Finurlige Flyselskab, everything is recycled. From the old mirror to the Spiderman doll that sits on top of a pile of toys. Everything is from the recycling centre REUSE in Aarhus.

Det Finurlige Flyselskab hosts creative workshops in Gellerup for families with children to teach the kids about climate and sustainability. It is the captain's and flight attendant's mission to teach the children how to turn discarded recycling into new toys.

Today, the children Ömer, Eik, Zeyned, Sally and Hamza are at the workshop. They are going to make their very own mirror. The mirror is going to be decorated with toys from the big pile that covers the entire tabletop.

Hamza, six, has chosen to glue Batman onto the frame. He likes gluing things together and it looks good too. Across from him is Sally. She loves that so many children have donated their used toys at the recycling station.

"I don't think, you should throw away toys. Not when other kids can use it. Recycling is much better than just throwing stuff out," Sally says.

The mirrors, the children are making, are all different, but the one thing they have in common is that when the children go home, they are going to hang the mirrors on their walls. A great reminder that it is better to recycle than to discard.

Visit Det Finurlige Flyselskab at the Climate Festival in Gellerup

19 June, you can participate in a workshop hosted by Det Finurlige Flyselskab at the Climate Festival in Gellerup.

Get ready for a fun day focusing on climate, sustainability, recycling and heaps of fun activities. Captain Holm and Senior Flight Attendant Stegeager look forward to welcoming you and your family 'aboard'.

Do you want to make a green difference?

Then you should join the Green Changemakers. An exciting climate course consisting of five camp days all in the first week of the Danish school summer holiday. This is your chance to use your brain and hands and discover how you can be an active part of Aarhus' green transition.

You will participate in a series of workshops and experiment with upcycling, repairs, food and design. Green ChangeMakers are based in DoKK1's World Room and many of the workshops take place at inspiring companies and organisations in Aarhus, where they will explain how they help make a positive difference to the environment.

During the camp, the participants will work on producing films on a climate topic of their choice. The camp ends with a film premiere for families and friends.

GREEN CHANGEMAKERS

The event is for children in Danish 6th and 7th grade (ages 11-14) and takes place from Monday to Friday in week 26.

clubs create inclusive communities for all

When you are part of a club, you are part of a community, no matter your needs. Lystrup Svømning (swim club) is one of the clubs that has made an extra effort to include special needs children.

"We try our best to create an environment that includes everyone. In that spirit, we offer summer activities for special needs children. Maybe you are diagnosed ADHD, suffer from anxiety or something that means you need a bit of extra help and fixed boundaries to be a part of the club, and we are happy to accommodate," says Jesper Nielsen, club developer at Lystrup Svømning.

Lystrup Svømning is a somewhat extraordinary, as it does not offer an elite or competition section, but focuses on breadth and broadness.

"One of our key values is to make room for everyone. We believe that clubs and unions can provide a community that allows you to be part of something, and not just a place to come and go," Jesper Nielsen says.

On 25 June, the swim club hosts a fun run for special needs children, and on 13 July an activity day focusing on "Everyone being part of the community".

"No matter the special needs, you can participate in exciting and fun activities that look like all the other activities. We try to create a space and some boundaries that allow for inclusion. For instance, you have to bring a companion or your parents. We think, it's important for everyone to experience what it is like to be part of a club's community and it is our experience that the children benefit greatly from being part of a community," says Jesper Nielsen.

All special needs children are welcome no matter their needs.

Can moped gangs be climate friendly?

If you ask Ungdomsskolen Ungi Aarhus SYD (after school youth club) that has invested noise free and odourless electric scooters, the answer is yes.

Ungdomsskolen thought it perfectly natural to invest in electric scooters as they were about to replace their old scooters. To avoid the noise of gasoline fuelled scooters and the spread of particle pollution - but also to initiate a dialogue with the teenagers about green transition.

Strong team spirit at the Junior Rangers

Every year, the environmental organisation, Forests of the World, educate young people to become nature guides. They call themselves Junior Rangers.

Rahaf, Jabrill and Fatem are Junior Rangers. They are dedicated rangers who love the strong team spirit and they help make a difference.

Junior Rangers, is a course created by the environmental organisation Forests of the Word to teach young people how to communicate the benefits of nature. Their tasks are based on climate, sustainability and the ability to pass on information to the kids in their local area.

The young rangers are paid to join and solve a series of tasks such as creating climate videos and handing out flyers about events in the area. Rahaf says that she has gained much more from the course than she expected: "Some of my best friends are from this course. The community is strong and, at the same time, I gain an insight into how the climate affects everybody's future".

Junior Rangers collaborate with other young people from Uganda and Bolivia. According to Fatem, she has changed her view on the climate:

"I think, we complain too much about things in Denmark. We are so lucky. In Uganda and Bolivia, climate change has such negative effects. Which is sad. Luckily, the other Junior Rangers from Uganda and Bolivia excel at recycling. They recycle everything. It is meant to affect the climate positively. We can learn a lot from them here in Denmark".

Fatem has been a Junior Ranger for three years. She thinks, we could do so much more for the environment. It would take a greater effort from society at large. It takes a strong focus and commitment to the climate.

Facts about Junior Rangers:

As a Junior Ranger, you are part of a course with other young people where, among others, you go on trips and learn about nature mediation.
